8 ADDITIONAL COVID-19 POSITIVE CASES THIS WEEK AND 4 HOSPITALIZATIONS

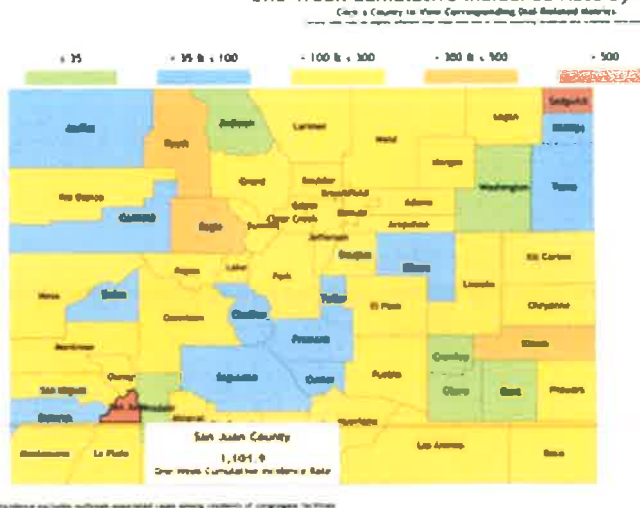

Silverton, CO: San Juan County Public Health identified 8 additional local Covid-19 cases this week for a total of 41 cases since August 3, 2021 and have had 4 locals hospitalized due to COVID-19.

- The Delta Variant is 2xs as contagious as the original strain of COVID-19.
- Hospitalization is 7xs more likely in unvaccinated people.
- The COVID-19 vaccines reduce the severity of the disease and decrease the risk of hospitalization for vaccinated persons.
- Different levels of activities will increase your risk of contracting COVID-19. Working with the public, attending large gatherings and being immunocompromised all increase the risk of contracting COVID-19.

SJCPH has implemented a public health order requiring all persons to wear a mask indoors in public spaces and to avoid gatherings indoors to reduce their chances of contracting Covid-19 during the high transmission conditions happening here in San Juan County.

- 8 Covid-19 positive cases this week
- 41 Covid-19 positive cases identified during this current community outbreak
- 60 Covid-19 tests performed this week at SJCPH
- 4 local community members have been hospitalized due to COVID-19
- San Juan County remains in LEVEL RED-SEVERE RISK
- 1 active outbreak per CDPHE

“Community consciousness has always been a part of our success in managing this pandemic locally and we continue to ask our community to step-up. Yes the primary source of Covid-19 cases are from unvaccinated residents but we are also seeing vaccinated locals contract Covid as well. This only proves to us that the vaccine creates a line of defense but does not make us invincible to this disease or the variants. Whether we are vaccinated or not, wearing a mask indoors in public spaces and avoiding large social gatherings is more important than ever, especially here in Silverton/San Juan County at this time.” Becky Joyce, RN, Public Health Director

WHEREAS, the full CEDS is updated every five years; and;

WHEREAS, the CEDS includes Community Development Action Plans ("CDAPs"), which are the lists of identified projects and which are updated on a two-year cycle; and,

WHEREAS, CDAPs are useful tools for organizations working within San Juan County and can be one central source for understanding the full range of projects that are in process or are desired; and,

WHEREAS, the CDAP is required for many state and federal funding sources; and,

Hello -

I am not sure who to send this email to, so please forward as appropriate.

I wanted to share a very positive experience my family and I had with Sheriff Bruce Conrad. My wife, my two boys (ages 5 and 2) and I were in Silverton last week as part of an RV trip to celebrate my 5 year old starting kindergarten next week. We rented an RV and spent several days camping in the area. We were driving the RV from our campsite into town for dinner this past Sunday (8/8/21) when I felt something was wrong with how the RV was driving. I pulled over in front of the fire station and found a large rock wedged between the two back tires on one side of the RV. I had no tools with me and was on the ground trying to figure out how I was going to get this rock out. Within a couple of minutes Sheriff Conrad pulled up on his motorcycle and asked if I needed help. He not only figured out how to remove it by deflating one of the tires, but he worked with one of the firemen on duty to deflate the tire, pry the rock out, inflate the tire, then took the time to check everything over to make sure there was no damage to the sidewall of the tires to ensure our safety. He was extremely helpful and kind to me and my family and didn't hesitate to help us out. I'm not sure what I would have done if he hadn't come along to check on us. I am truly grateful to the Sheriff.

As a bonus the whole time the Sheriff was working on our RV the fireman on duty (I'm sorry I didn't get his name) was giving my boys a tour of the firehouse and letting them explore all the vehicles. Truly a special moment for my boys and one of the highlights of the trip in their eyes.

Too often you only hear from citizens or visitors when they have a complaint. We had a wonderful time in the Silverton area and we owe that in part to the Sheriff and the fireman for taking care of us when we needed help.

Thank you! We will certainly be back for another visit.

Subject: COUNTY ROAD-2
Reply-To: Jack Clark <jc1hardrock@aol.com>

We are writing to inquire if you might have a plan about how to eliminate the horrific dust problem that exists on County Road 2 from the mayflower Mill Site to Eureka. For years now we who own property along this road have tolerated the dust, and nearly every year the county applies magnesium Chloride to the road, it is wet for a couple of days, which we would try and stay off of since it eats the metal in our automobiles, then after this period it is dried out and the dust problem is solved. For about two weeks, when pot holes in the road develop because of the abnormal amount of traffic this road now has to accommodate, and the county crew blades the road smooth again, and the dust is back.....We hate to coin a phrase, but the definition of insanity, is trying the same things over & over, & expecting a different result. maybe it would be a good idea if members of the county commissioners would take a field trip to Ridgway, drive back to Ouray on the old railroad grade, and experience what Ouray County did to this road to eliminate most of the problems with dust & pot holes. We spoke with some employees on the road & bridge department of Ouray County, and they explained that they hauled clay from Montrose, compacted in into this road, spread 3/4" road base, and then compacted this into the mix, we were hoping that something like this solution could actually work on our County Road 2. And here is another possibility, apply for a grant from either the state of Colorado, or perhaps the Federal Government, being that this dust situation is actually a serious health problem for inhabitants along the road, as well as anyone traveling on this road. And who Knows-? you might actually be able to have it paved.

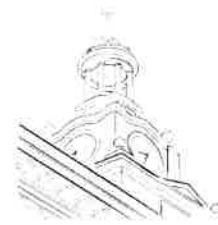

Thank You:

Re-evaluation of work-life priorities drive labor shortage in Southwest Colorado

Employees share complex reasons behind job transitions

By Shannon Mullane Herald Staff Writer

La Plata County employers, with “now hiring” signs posted, are asking why candidates are not showing up.

Their absence could signal a long-term shift in the way Americans do business.

Employers in Durango and across the country are struggling to fill open positions during the busy tourism season, saying high housing costs and generous unemployment benefits are keeping people from signing up.

"I don't think that things are going to go back to normal," said Mike French, executive director of the La Plata County Economic Development Alliance.

He has helped organize a local survey to try to understand the issue. The Economic Alliance has refocused its next summit on what might be happening with the workforce transformation, inviting national experts to speak about the issue.

"This is bigger than our area. This is a national and systemic challenge," he said. "So, it's not unique to us. What's important is how we respond."

'I don't think people saw this coming'

Managers in short-staffed restaurants are working dish pits in the kitchen. Existing employees are pulling longer days and working double shifts, while at the same time businesses are shortening hours of operation.

Meanwhile, the unemployment rate in La Plata County is 5.8%.

Some say early September will mark a return to "normal." That is when the federal government plans to stop offering an extra $300 per week in unemployment benefits in addition to state benefits.

Such an expectation might be a misjudgment. French said.

"People have reset their values and their expectations," he said. "They have modified their lifestyles as a result of the pandemic and the lockdown, and they've re-evaluated what they're expecting out of work. Some have found new opportunities that didn't exist before.

"I don't think people saw this coming."

Brian Bailey used to work as sous chef at El Moro Spirits and Tavern in Durango before he essentially quit his job during the shutdowns at the start of the pandemic.

Now, he is the executive director of In the Weeds, a nonprofit that supports restaurant and hospitality staff members.

"I love our industry ... We connect through our food, drink and atmosphere," he said. "But burnout is a huge thing. I try to help prevent that, and help people see that. I see what In the Weeds is doing as more important."

Locally, there is not enough data to clearly show the causes behind the workforce shortage. But anecdotally, it comes down to several factors: stress, child care costs, housing prices, wage equality and new opportunities.

"Almost daily, you see people bowing out in online forums," Bailey said.

Employees wanted better pay for the work they were doing – a challenge for employers, said Bailey and Dave Woodruff, general manager at El Moro Spirits and Tavern and president of the Durango chapter of the Colorado Restaurant Association.

Higher wages and other rising expenses can result in higher menu prices, which customers are not yet ready to accept, they each said.

Some employees were stressed about their health and COVID-19 exposure. Frequently, service industry workers are subject to other people's anger over face mask mandates and public health restrictions.

Woodruff said some of his employees were even spit on by angry customers.

Then, stress doubled as employees were asked to work even harder to cover for short-staffed businesses.

Erin Cwierniewicz, a server at the Durango Diner, smiles as she works Friday. Cwierniewicz never left the service industry despite added stressors during the pandemic. (Jerry McBride/Durango Herald)

“I think it was the pressure, the demands, not getting enough sleep, enough to eat – just the volume and the amount of customers we had to handle,” she said. Working at the Durango Diner is now her main gig.

Bailey worked 50 hours a week for In the Weeds and 20 hours each week as a bar back for several months.

“I left simply because of exhaustion,” he said.

Across multiple industries, people opted to stay home to care for their children rather than pay thousands of dollars each year for child care. Rising housing prices deterred others from accepting or keeping jobs.

Ryan Dorsey, cook at the Durango Diner, works the grill during lunch Friday. Dorsey said friends in the service industry have left to pursue other opportunities. (Jerry McBride/Durango Herald)

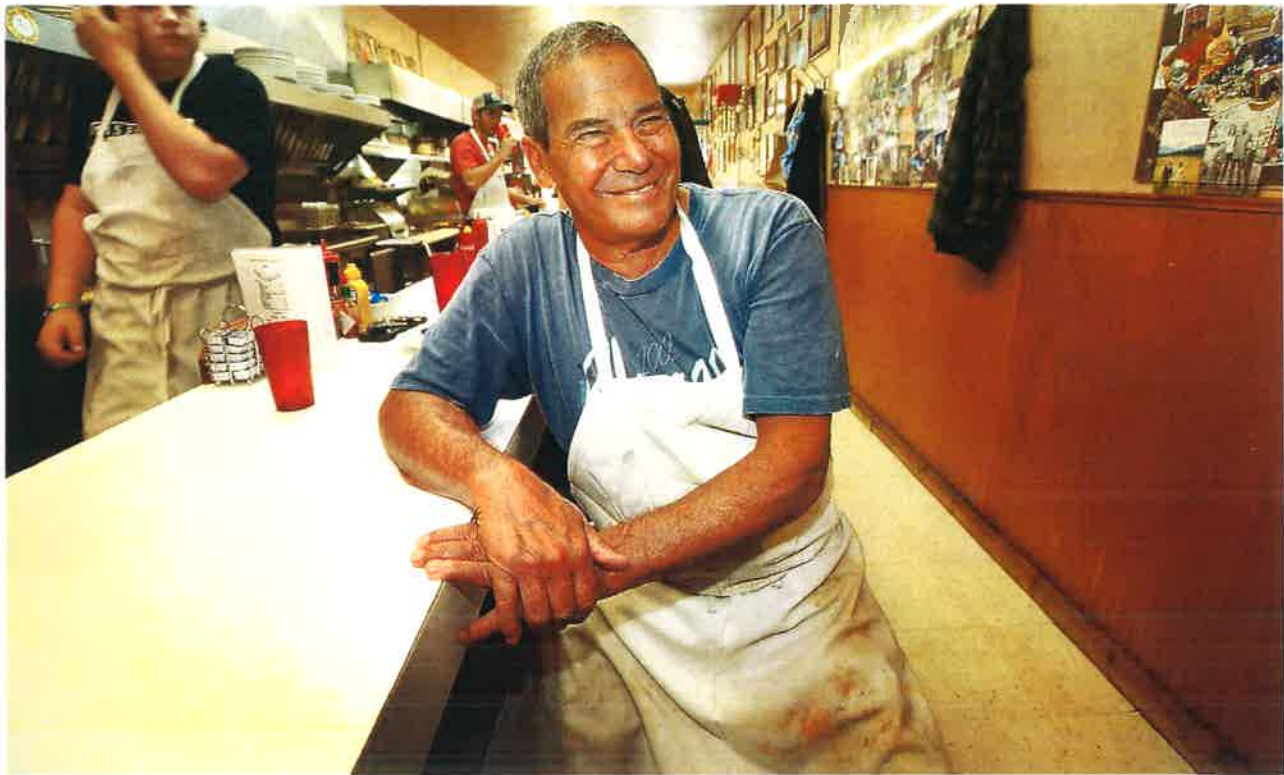

New candidates with the city of Durango were leaving old positions to be closer to family or because of layoffs. People are looking for stability and seeking flexible or remote options, said Erin Heider, human resources director.

People also had more of a scarce resource: time. Days during shutdowns to re-evaluate what they want and need from their work.

In the service industry, people re-evaluated and left for construction jobs, Cwierniewicz said. Ryan Dorsey, a cook at the Durango Diner, said a friend left the industry to pursue a career in business.

“COVID has provided an opportunity to reflect on what folks are doing now, and what they may want to do instead, and they are taking the opportunity to seek a new path,” Heider said.

What to do?

The workforce transition has caught experts, strategists and human resources staff members by surprise, French said.

“I think the most important thing for employers to do right now is to listen to what the employees are asking for and what their newfound care-about are,” he said. “I think they need to get their arms around that with their employees and have an open dialogue.”

He questioned the impact of sunseting federal unemployment benefits.

“Will that be a silver bullet? I’m not sure. It’ll help, but I don’t think it’s going to resolve it,” he said. “We’ll soon find out.”

Woodruff said attracting people to Durango is easy. Retaining them means thinking differently about the “trifecta” of retainment: child care, affordable housing and affordable health care. Restaurants might need to work collaboratively to shift into new operations, like dropping tips for higher hourly wages.

But the brunt of the work is falling on business owners, and other entities, like the state and the federal government need to step up, he said.

“I think it’s forcing the conversation,” Woodruff said. “I think this is going to be a more long-term conversation around, ‘How do we do this better?’ Maybe that’s the silver lining to all of this.”
